

Growing up with Max as a dad meant a house full of love and support as well as a home of goofy songs and poems. This song was a favorite of his and hopefully will continue to be passed down for many more generations.

It was a cool day in October,
I was feeling far from sober,
I was walking along takin' life in stride.
When my heart began to flutter,
So, I laid down in the gutter,
And a pig came up and laid down by my side.
Oh we talked about the weather,
Like when good friends get together.
And a lady passing by was heard to say,
"You can tell a man who boozes by the company he chooses".
And the pig got up and slowly walked away.
Yes, that pig got up and slowly walked away.

We are grateful for Dad and Mom and all they taught us; to love the gospel and serve others and not to take life so seriously.
