She has no claim to worldly fame,
It was never her desire;

To be at the fare directing fate, but rather by the fi;
She tends her home and family with a gentle, quiet love.

No stranger to adversity, she meets problems face to face;

She counteracts life's crushing blows
with courage and with grace;

And always you can sense in her a gentle, quiet strength.

She never preached a sermon, but you see within her eyes,

An ever growing knowledge of the Majesty on High;
She blesses those around her with a gentle, quiet faith.

Charity was her motto and the beauty of her days.
