Ralph W. Coen

He was the youngest of seven boys. So what, it's just one boy more?
No one could know when Ralph William was born, what blessings of life were in store.
I didn't know him when he was young. He was married to Darlene by then.
But Uncle or not, even older than I, it was easy to make him my friend.

With smiles so easy and twinkling eyes, he's a breath of fresh air in the room.
With his cup half full and a positive view...he knows it will be better soon.
For years and years, he looked like St. Nick...with a belly and a beard to show.
The beard is now gone but the belly survives and still on his face is a glow.

Such a gentle spirit he showed to the world, a man who could sure speak his mind.
But always an ear he had for OUR thoughts...for us he always had time.
He worked through the years in many a town...He has lots of friends far and wide.
A faith never shaken that helped mold his life...for he looked to God as his guide.

He's made lots of children a part of his life....He gave them his all to share.
With patience and kindness he let each one know...that his love would always be there.
They came in and out of his family's life... a life Darlene and he shared.
But there was one question that never came up...just whether or not that he cared.

He lost his true love a few years ago. Life for him won't be the same.
But life does go on though he loved her so much...the memories will always remain.
How can I express how I really feel...about this great uncle of mine.
Just know Uncle Ralph...you mean so much to me...my love will go on for all time.
