

I dreamt a dream so Filled with you, I laughed at my Soft tear-stained pillow.

My Daughter

She runs through a meadow of violet and daisy;
her long hair chasing the wind
Her cheeks are becoming a rosy blush
I hear her young laughter sing in the breeze
as she chases the amber butterfly.

The delicate insect alights on a flower;
perched and tense...
My daughter stands in curiosity above it,
The butterfly net raised by one plump hand in midair...

In one quick, fleeting second the net moves;
a blur in the sun,
upon the beautiful winged creature
And she captures it;
Set her free...
