*In shadows cast by time's relentless hand,
A solemn tale unfolds, both sad and grand.
A husband, father, grandfather, now at rest,
His journey's end, a poignant final quest.*

*A partner's absence, an empty chair,
A father's guidance, no longer there.
Yet, in the whispers of the autumn breeze,
His spirit dances through the rustling trees.*

*A grandfather's joy, a twinkle in his eye,
Now stilled, beneath the vast and starry sky.
But in the hearts of those he leaves behind,
His love and warmth eternally enshrined.*

*Grief may linger, like shadows in the night,
Yet, memories bloom in the soft moonlight.
For in the tapestry of life, woven and spun,
His legacy lives on, the journey done.*

*So, let us mourn with tears that gently flow,
Celebrate the love that continues to grow.
In the tapestry of time, a thread may sever,
Yet love endures, in the hearts that treasure.*
