A LETTER TO MY BABY BROTHER

Dear Boobs,

You hated that name in public, but I remember when you were born.. We went from being three the hard way to four at first we were mad but then its like you grew on us.. We were inseparable.. You were my twin. I gave you the name boobs I always because I remember you when you were my fat little chunky baby brother who wanted to be like me. I remember walking you up the hill, sitting at your baseball practice. You wanting to be a Kauffman Scholar because I was , abd always talking about how you were going to be a college student at Baylor crazy how life works out. I remember when I got diagnosed with ESRD, you would be on me about eating healthy and staying active like you knew what you were talking about.You always called to check on me or to talk when you were bored because you felt like I protected you but lowkey you were protecting me. Anything I needed you were always a call away. Since you've been gone, I have been telling myself you are on vacation because I can't bear the thought of you not coming back ever. I talked to God all the time and tell him to wake me up from this dream, because it's one that seems like it's pulling at my heartstrings just to give me strength brother.
