The Northern Tier Christian School Announces Premier Opening
Parents Interested in Private Christian Education Invited to Contact

WELLSBORO, PA—May 22, 2014—The Northern Tier Christian School (TNTCS) is Pennsylvania's local branch of the Adventist Education Journey to Excellence system providing private, Bible based Christian education to Kindergarten through Grade 8 students in the northern tier of Pennsylvania and the surrounding areas of the southern tier of New York. TNTCS has opened enrollment for the school year beginning in the fall of 2014. Parents and others interested in a quality private Christian education alternative for their children are invited to obtain more information by contacting the school at ntchristianschool@gmail.com or calling 570-404-7443.

“We are extremely proud to offer the parents of the northern tier region of Pennsylvania and the southern tier of New York an alternative option for private Christian education,” states Marvin Humbert, M-Div., pastor of Hillcrest and Blossburg Seventh Day Adventist churches, whose members fund and support the operation of TNTCS with their tithes and offerings. “We are committed to providing quality Christian education with high academic standards and welcome children of all religious, ethnic and cultural backgrounds. We will inspire and equip your child (or children) to develop academic excellence and a life of service for God, based upon Biblical values.”

Located in the scenic countryside outside of Wellsboro, PA at 1292 Charleston Road, TNTCS offers low student/teacher ratios, low tuition and entrance fees, and individualized instruction to maximize the potential for student success by recognizing the uniqueness of each student. Parents who enroll their children in TNTCS can expect to find a compassionate teacher who fosters learning opportunities for balanced development of the whole person—spiritual, physical, intellectual, and social-emotional—a process that spans a lifetime. School busing is available from most areas of the surrounding school districts. One parent who chooses to drive her son to an Adventist school stated, “I drive every day just so my child can experience a Christian education and the freedom to worship. Although my child is only in Kindergarten, his interest to learn more about God is a blessing. My son raves about his teacher all the time and how much he loves going to school.”

From 2006 to 2009, the CognitiveGenesis study project gathered massive amounts of data about the academic achievement and abilities of 51,706 students in more than 800 Adventist elementary schools and academies in the United States. The students were in grades 3 to 9, and also in grade 11. The study results indicated, in all grades, in schools of all sizes, students in Adventist schools outperformed the national average in all subjects (after controlling for availability).
