A Life Well Lived

My Aunt was a self-taught chef. She started her cooking journey at a young age preparing bacon and eggs for her siblings, which always landed the kids in hot water with our mom.

She continued to hone her cooking skills by working in her parents' diner during her teen years and learned the techniques of preparing food for large crowds. My Aunt was the "go to person" to help prepare for all events. Not only did she cater food, but you could always count on her to press and curl your hair for an event or holiday. It was always said that she could manage her way around any kitchen, even the kitchen on the back of your neck with her hot comb. Her culinary escapades brought joy and laughter to our family gatherings, and we'll forever cherish the memories of her delicious triumphs. Farewell to our beloved, "chef extraordinaire" may your heavenly kitchen be stocked with endless ingredients of love and laughter.

We take solace in knowing that she is in heaven, swapping recipes with the angels and probably convincing them to add a little more spice to their heavenly dishes or convincing them to add pickle juice to their heavenly potato salad.
