You'll Meet Again!

There is no explanation, no answer to be found
For a loss of this proportion, a heartache so profound
This child of yours was cherished, each moment of each day
She knew how you adored her, she knew your gentle way.

She felt it in your phone calls, when she was on her own
She knew you were beside her, she never felt alone
And when you were together, she saw it in your smile
She felt it in your warm embrace, she knew it all the while.

She never had to question her value or her worth
She knew that she was treasured, from the moment of her birth
She knew her joys were your joys, she was a part of you
And she'll remain within your hearts, in all you say and do.

The bond will not be broken, the love will never die
She knows you're grieving for her, she sees the tears you cry
To lose her is so tragic, it takes a toll on you
But try, in time, to find some peace, you know she'd want you to.

And one day God will call you, with your daughter by His side
Smiling she will meet you and the gates will open wide,
Once again you'll hold her and it's here that you shall dwell
Joined again forever with the daughter you loved so well!
