Poem

Son why you keep running never stopping to sleep
Momma because I love the streets

Son why you love her when you know the company she keeps
Momma because I love the streets

Son she has the blood of many stained on her sheets
But momma I love the streets

Son she steals souls and hides them six feet deep
I know momma, but I love the streets

Son the rhythm of hatred is why her heart beats
I know momma, but I love the streets

Son I know you love her, always remember this fact
The streets will never love you back
