

THE RIDE

By: Perry Joe Frost

He's there in the chute,
And he's waitin' for you;
And you're too danged nervous
To know what to do.

You think to yourself,
Now why am I here?
'Cause your mouth's dry as dirt
And your gut's full of fear.

But you go and get on him,
Get settled down right,
And ol' Joe pulls your rope up,
And you wrap it up tight.

You nod to the chute man,
And the swingin' gate flies.
It's just you and a critter
That's twelve times your size.

There's a quick flash of color--
You know it's the clown
Standin' ready to help you
In case you get down.

You're set in the middle
With a leg on each side,
And that bull's busy buckin'
One helluva ride.

There's horns and a hump
And he's twistin' and spinnin'
You're both really tryin'
And you don't know who's winnin'.

And 'bout now you're thinkin'
It's sure a long eight,
But then there's the whistle
And you know you've done great.

You reach for the dally
And step to the ground
To the hootin' and cheerin'.
Man, what a sound!

It's tough and it's risky,
But when it all comes together,
Ain't nothin' more excitin'
Than ridin' live leather.
