Top tips for buying safe products from online marketplaces

What is an online marketplace?

Online marketplaces (OMPs) are an additional option to businesses own websites, these are platforms online that allow people or businesses to sell items. The seller does not own or control the digital platform through which the goods on offer are being advertised or sold. It can also mean the platform does not have responsibility for the items being sold.

Product safety

It's important to know that currently there is no legal requirement for online marketplaces to check the safety of products third party sellers post up on selling platforms. Therefore, it is essential that consumers know how to buy products that are safe and know how to report unsafe items.

When we are looking for a certain item it can be very tempting to go for cheaper options, however sometimes this can be a red flag that something might not be genuine. Take time to look into whether the item is genuine and establish who the seller is before you make the purchase.

There are many legitimate small and large businesses that sell their products via OMPs whose products comply with UK safety regulations. However, there are also individual sellers and scammers that can also use these platforms.

Safety checks you can make

It can be confusing for consumers to identify who is a trader, who is a private seller and whether the OMP has any responsibilities to the consumer. However there are some checks that we can do to try to reduce the risk of buying unsafe or illegal items.

Checks you can make

Check the item conforms to UK and EU regulations. Certain products, such as toys, electrical and gas items sold in the UK must have markings to demonstrate they have met UK safety standards. Until 1 January 2023, products sold in Great Britain may display:

- CE marking, or
- UKCA marking, or
- UKCA marking and CE marking, or
- UKNI marking and CE marking

What type of selling platform is it? Find out if it allows other businesses or private sellers to use it.

What countries can use the platform?

Use secure payment methods, be wary of sellers that try to change contact details or payment arrangements.

Toy safety

Check if the item is a toy – there are many items that can look like toys or are advertised as toys but are not suitable for children.

Check the age suitability for your child and the product you are considering buying – do the pictures of the child in the picture match the age warnings on the product?

Know who owns the brand of toy or game and look for that name when searching an online marketplace, as well as on the packaging when you receive it.

When the item arrives, check it over before you give it to a child. Check for faults, detachable small parts, access to stuffing and loose or accessible batteries or magnets.

Useful resources

Use available browser extensions that will flag potentially unsafe items or those not being sold by official manufacturers or retailers.
