Eternal life is the reward that will be given to all who obey the two great principles of God’s law-love to God and love to man. The first four commandments define and enjoin love to God; the last six, love to our fellow men. Obedience to these commands is the only evidence man can give that he possesses a genuine, saving knowledge of God. Love for God is demonstrated by love for those for whom Christ has died. While enshrouded in the pillar of cloud, Christ gave directions regarding this love. Distinctly and clearly He laid down the principles of heaven as rules that His chosen people were to observe in their dealings one with another. These principles Christ lived out in His life of humanity. In His teaching He presented the motives that should govern the lives of His followers...

The qualities that it is essential for all to possess in order to know God are those that mark the completeness of Christ’s character-His love, His patience, His unselfishness. These attributes are cultivated by doing kind actions with a kindly heart. From That I May Know Him, pg.9
